The 100 Best Novels list was pulled from a list of 400 possible novels. It appears that the full list of 400 came from the Modern Library's published works. The list was chosen by the Modern Library's board, which was made up of 9 men and 1 woman, with only one person of color in the group. Their stated goal was to get people talking about great works of literature, and of course to sell books.
